Speaker: Wei Wei Lee, MD, MPH, Assistant Professor of Medicine, Assistant Dean of Students and Director of Wellness Core Faculty, Internal Medicine Residency, University of Chicago Pritzker School of Medicine Office, Chicago, IL. Dr. Lee has disclosed that she does not have any relevant financial relationships with commercial interests.

Overview:
Electronic medical record (EMR) adoption in healthcare is on the rise. Studies demonstrate that electronic medical records (EMRs) used in exam rooms can have a negative impact on patient-doctor communication. While there are known skills and behaviors that can enhance patient-centered use of the EMR, providers are often not taught these key communication skills. This session will help participants understand how EMR use affects the patient-doctor relationship, review best practices and teach participants the skills to use the EMR to enhance patient doctor communication.

Desired Learning Outcomes: At the completion of this learning activity, participants should be able to:

- Grasp the impact that the use of technology has on patient-doctor communication and identify best practices for patient-centered technology;
Identify at least one (1) new EHR skill or behavior, as a tool, to enhance patient communication within the clinical setting.

The Chicago Medical Society is accredited by the Accreditation Council for Continuing Medical Education (ACCME) to provide continuing medical education for physicians.

The Chicago Medical Society designates this live activity for a maximum of 1.0 AMA PRA Category 1 Credit (s)™. Physicians should claim only the credit commensurate with the extent of their participation in the activity.

The following planning members of the Chicago Medical Society's CME Committee have disclosed that they do not have any relevant financial relationships with any commercial interests: Ajay Chauhan, MD, Chairman, Howard Axe, MD, Loren Schecter, MD, Vickie Becker, MD, Adrienne L. Fregia, MD, Robert W. Panton, MD, Kathy Tynus, MD, and Cecilia Merino, Director of Education.
